

MEDIA RELEASE

Restrictions for people arriving from NSW extended until Friday August 7th. Quarantine restriction removed for people coming from the ACT.

It has been decided to extend the current requirement for people who have spent time in NSW in the preceding 14 days to quarantine on the island. There is a low level of community transmission in NSW and for an abundance of caution it has been decided to extend the current restriction for a further seven (7) days. This means that up to the 7th of August anybody who has spent time in NSW, is required to quarantine for 14 days on arrival into the island.

Since there has been no new cases recorded in the ACT the quarantine restriction has been removed in relation to people coming from there, providing they have not overnighted in NSW on the way to Norfolk.

This requirement does not apply to passengers who have had to transit through Sydney airport in the same day on the way to Norfolk from the other states. The island remains closed to people from Victoria and hotspots listed on the Queensland Government website and entry passes will be denied from these areas. Queensland has today listed metropolitan Sydney as hotspot areas and therefore people from the listed Local Government Areas will be denied Entry Passes.

The restrictions will be reviewed again next week.
